Approval Received for Sims Resource Renewal Pilot Facility and Programme Update

Sims Limited (“Sims” or the “Company”) today announced planning development approval was granted by the Brisbane City Council and the Queensland Government for its pilot Resource Renewal facility at Rocklea in Queensland.

The Rocklea pilot facility is expected to be operational in 2022. It will focus primarily on research and development to advance the technology used across the programme.

Sims Resource Renewal plans to build several facilities around the world by 2030 to enable the company to transform more than one million tonnes of the material left over following metal recycling into new, useful products for society each year.

Following a commercial demonstration in Oregon, USA and an investigation into potential output products, Sims also announced that it plans to produce hydrogen for industrial use at its proposed facility at Campbellfield in Victoria.

Commenting on the announcement, Alistair Field, CEO and Managing Director said, “Sims Resource Renewal is about creating a truly closed loop in metals recycling and a genuinely circular business model.”

Producing hydrogen supports the transition to a more sustainable energy landscape, and it enables Sims to advance its purpose to create a world without waste to preserve our planet.

Sims Resource Renewal will use green energy to power its proposed Campbellfield facility.

At Campbellfield, Sims will continue with its plans to produce materials for construction, helping to increase the use of recycled materials in critical infrastructure, such as roads.

Authorised for lodgement by: The Company Secretary, Gretchen Johanns.
