MARKET COMMENTARY

Most major equity markets turned the corner in October following September's sharp sell off, with most indices at or near all-time highs to end the month.

Short-term interest rates and longer-term bond yields have returned to the fore as key variables for share markets, as major central banks start thinking about winding back their ultra-accommodative programs they put in place during the COVID-19 crisis.

During the month, the ASX Small Ords (+0.9%), S&P 500 (+7.0%), Nasdaq (+7.3%), MSCI Europe (+4.7%) and Russell 2000 (+4.3%) generated positive returns while the ASX200 (-0.1%) detracted slightly from performance.

In the prior month in September, the U.S. stock market took a major hit with the S&P 500 (-4.7%), Nasdaq (-5.3%) and Russell 2000 (-3.0%) detracting significantly from performance. In October however, U.S. markets took a big leap forward and recovered all its losses from September. The consumer discretionary and energy sectors were the strongest performers albeit all sectors positively contributed to performance which was driven by a very strong start to the September quarter end reporting season in the U.S.

Turning to the U.S. economy more broadly, we are cognisant of inflation pressures driven by significant bottlenecks in the supply chain which is hampering the global recovering. These supply chain problems have been exacerbated by a surge in consumer spending through COVID-19 and now the 'revenge spending' phenomenon as people are freed from extended periods of lockdown. We are closely observing when these issues get resolved as this should alleviate a lot of the upwards pressure on inflation.

Domestically, the ASX didn't experience the same run as other major global stock exchanges with the ASX Small Ords and ASX200 returning +0.9% and -0.1% respectively as noted above. Looking at the ASX Small Ords index, the Materials sector was the best performer (+7.1%) and outlier in October, driven by many base metal prices moving higher. The Australian 10yr bond yield played catch up to the previous month's moves in the US, rising a massive 0.52% to 2.09% as the RBA stepped away from its yield curve target and we saw a stronger than expected inflation print domestically.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

During October, the Ophir High Conviction Fund's investment portfolio returned -0.1% (net of fees) versus the index which returned +0.6%. Since its inception in August 2015, the Fund has returned +20.4% p.a. (net of fees) while the index has returned +12.8% p.a.

During October, the Ophir High Conviction Fund's ASX listing provided a total return of -2.0% for the month.

The biggest contributor to performance in October was Hub24 (ASX:HUB). HUB is a financial services company and provides portfolio administration services to financial advisers, stockbrokers, accountants and direct clients through their wealth management platforms. The company rose on the back of strong first quarter net inflows to start the 2021-2022 financial year.

The biggest detractor to performance during the month was Domino's Pizza (ASX:DMP). Today, DMP has over 2,900 stores in over 10 countries around the world. The company suffered post its Annual General Meeting due to unforeseen weaknesses in some regions such as Japan.

In terms of our portfolio positioning, cash remains relatively low, and we have a modest bias towards businesses that are benefitting from economies reopening. We're also conscious of those companies that can manage cost input pressures to those that cannot in the Fund due to the risk of more persistent inflation through supply chains.

Higher bond yields have generally been a positive for 'value' style (cheap) companies and a headwind for 'growth' style (expensive) ones, particularly more recently. For us, this continues to mean avoiding the most expensive 'growth' style companies as we continue to see more upwards pressure on bond yields at present.
